Whales are sea-living mammals. They therefore breathe air but cannot survive on land. Some species are very large indeed and the blue whale, which can exceed 30 m in length, is the largest animal to have lived on earth. Superficially, the whale looks like a fish, but there are important differences in its external structure: its tail consists of a pair of broad, flat, horizontal paddles (the tail of a fish is vertical) and it has a single nostril on top of its large, broad head. The skin is smooth and shiny and beneath it lies a layer of fat (blubber). This is up to 30 cm in thickness and serves to conserve heat and body fluids.

Indonesia consist of different ethnic group, languages, cultures and traditions. The 17.000 island forming the world's largest archipelago chain is the home to more than 200 million people descended from over 200 different ethnic groups. There are over 350 different languages spoken. Bahasa Indonesia, the national language, seems to be a second language and not their mother tongue.

It is spoken as the first language only in the provinces of West Sumatra and the Riau Island.

Though Bahasa Indonesia is derived from Bahasa Melayu, there are some differences in meaning and pronunciation. Recently, there is a move to make Bahasa Indonesia (and Bahasa Melayu) accepted as one of the official languages of the Association of South East Asian Countries. This would give great significance to Bahasa Indonesia and make the learning of it more useful for the use not only in Indonesia but also in Malaysia, Singapore, and Brunei.
